Thomas J. Lockwood
Senior Advisor
Department of Homeland Security

Thomas Lockwood is a member of Department of Homeland Security's senior leadership team and is currently supporting the Department's screening coordination efforts. Applying his vision and leadership skills, he is actively engaged on identity management policy and technology efforts across a host of public and private sector applications and operations.

Mr. Lockwood has led and served on multiple federal, regional, and state inter-agency and interdisciplinary public policy, safety, and emergency management executive boards, committees, and coordinating bodies. Mr. Lockwood is the former-Director of the Office of National Capital Region Coordination, responsible for coordinating and strengthening ties between public, private, and regional authorities in the National Capital Region. Mr. Lockwood is also the former-Homeland Security Advisor for the State of Maryland, a leader in design-build team for the Virginia Class nuclear submarine, and design and lifecycle manager of various critical systems.

Mr. Lockwood served in the public and private sectors – including the transportation, chemical, pharmaceutical, and food sectors. He was a Brookings Institution Legis Fellow, a graduate of the Harvard Business School where he was the Chairman of his class, the University of Maryland, and Maine Maritime Academy. Mr. Lockwood is a former President of the Navy's Association of Scientists and Engineers, he is a member of the National Security Professional Community and the Department of Defense's Acquisition Professional Community, a graduate of multiple Department of Defense leadership and professional programs, and a recipient of numerous awards for his leadership and professional accomplishments.