Biography For Rex Min

Rex Min has held lifelong interests in technology, networks, and education. He graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with degrees in Electrical Engineering and Computer Science (B.S. 1998, M.Eng 1999, Ph.D 2003) and publications and a dissertation on energy-efficient wireless communication. He has been a researcher and developer of cybersecurity technologies for the Defense and Intelligence communities since 2003. He is currentlythe Program Manager for Cybersecurity Education at the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI), Assistant Director for Human Capital, and is an active ODNI representative to NICE.