Information security practitioners can sometimes become so involved in the minutiae of daily work that they cannot keep up with developments in the security field. This 90-minute tutorial summarizes key developments in the last year. Mich Kabay, Director of Education at ICSA, will review above ground information on computer crime, fraud, legislation and legal affairs; Dave Kennedy, Director of Research, will review underground information on vulnerabilities and exploits as well as crucial alerts from official sources.

This session will serve the interests of systems and network managers, I.T. managers, and anyone else wanting a quick introduction to the major events of the field in the preceding twelve months.

Because the tutorial draws on the latest events, detailed course materials will be provided at the presentation itself rather than printed in the Proceedings.
